Supported by SCORH

The Upper Midlands Rural Health Network was organized with the financial and technical assistance of the South Carolina Office of Rural Health (SCORH). The network is one of several rural health networks developed through SCORH. The SCORH is a 501(c)(3) organization dedicated to improving access to quality healthcare in rural communities.

For more information about this or other rural health networks, please call the SC Office of Rural Health at 803-454-3850 or visit www.scorh.net.

Mission

The Upper Midland Rural Health Network's (UNRHN) mission is to improve health in Chester, Fairfield, and Lancaster counties through a collaboration of a diverse group focused on access to care, health promotion, and education.

About Us

UMRHN is a three county network of health, human service, and educational providers in north central South Carolina. Established in 2004, UMRHN is a 501(c)(3) organization dedicated to improving access to health care and safety nets. The network meets monthly and is actively involved in several community projects.
